God's Heartbeat
Luke 15:1-32

When we say that two hearts are beating as one, we are expressing a belief that there is a deep loving relationship between these two people. Well, shouldn't our hearts beat together with God's heart? If it should, then we ought to be able to describe what makes God's heart beat!

A Lost Sheep

The lost have great value...

A shepherd and his sheep—remember, the value lies in _____

The Lost Coin

We must be diligent...

A woman and her coins—we must sometimes _____

The Prodigal Son

A story of selfishness...

A selfish son:

- * _____
- * Wishing his father were _____

A loving father:

- * Waiting for the _____
- * Only desiring _____

A selfish son (not the same)

- * _____
- * Angry and _____

A Closing Thought

What makes God's heart beat?

A passion for _____

A celebration of _____

You only get there by _____!

Some action steps to consider:

- * Have you signed up to adopt the families in your neighborhood?
- * Will you adopt them and commit to pray for them, by name, everyday?
- * Have you begun praying and asking God for opportunities to connect to these neighbors?

Our heartbeat ought to be in synch with God's. In other words, what makes God's heart beat ought to be the same thing that motivates us. If God is motivated by a desire to seek and to save the lost, then shouldn't that be our desire, as well?

Remember, the story of the lost sheep reminds us that there is value in the one that is lost. The story of the lost coin reminds us that sometimes it takes work to find the lost, and the story of the prodigal son reminds us that we cannot afford to get complacent with our attitude. We must pray for workers and for the lost; realizing that we just might be the workers that are needed in our own field (neighborhood)!
